

City of Victorville Logistics Centers

Located 90 miles northeast of Los Angeles, Victorville's three industrial parks, with a proposed fourth, have been chosen by nationally and internationally recognized companies to conduct manufacturing, warehousing and aerospace-related services. The city's industrial parks include the Southern California Logistics Airport (SCLA), the Southern California Logistics Centre (SCLC), the Foxborough Industrial Park and the planned Southern California Rail Complex.

Dr Pepper Snapple — 850,000 S.F. Building

SCLA has one of the nation's largest runways to accommodate wide-body aircraft. With 360 days of "severe clear" weather, land capacity for expansive facilities and utilities have attracted aerospace clients such as Boeing Co., Leading Edge Aviation, GE Transportation and Pacific Aerospace Resources and Technologies. Aerospace sectors currently doing business at SCLA include nonscheduled aircraft storage, aircraft parts warehousing, jet engine testing, flight testing, unmanned aircraft systems (UAS) pilot training, aircraft painting and maintenance repair and overhaul (MRO) services.

Additional development is also taking place at the Southern California Logistics Centre (SCLC), which is located immediately adjacent to SCLA. SCLC offers a wide variety of new warehouse and distribution facilities, ranging from 2,000 square feet to over 1 million square feet. Major tenants include United Furniture Industries (UFI), Dr Pepper Snapple Group, Newell Rubbermaid, Red Bull and M&M/ Mars Inc.

The Foxborough Industrial Park, located in the southeast part of the City of Victorville, has been developed as a key manufacturing and warehouse logistics operations location. Since 2000, Foxborough has provided direct rail access to Burlington Northern Santa Fe's (BNSF's) main line via a publicly owned rail spur. Its largest tenants include the Good-year Tire and Rubber Co., ConAgra Foods, Nutro Products Inc. and Church & Dwight Co. With a pro-business climate and robust intermodal offerings, Victorville is serving as the High Desert's industrial hub and bringing further investment to the city.
